LETTING GO

For the wisdom of this world is foolishness in God's sight (1 Cor. 3:19)

*"Now I know that you fear God, because you have not withheld from me your son, your only son."
(Genesis 22:12)*

There are things we cherish in this life - -good things. Our hearts knit to these things in such a way that we cannot imagine life without them.

We can't imagine life without our family, the children that wear us out, or the spouse that continues to surprise us, or the parents we once rebelled against. We can't imagine life without meaningful work and the challenges and rewards that come with it. We can't imagine life without the capacity to see the sky or walk on our own legs or swallow prime rib.

But sometimes we are asked to live without those things. We pay lip service to these things as "gifts" or "blessings." But when asked to give them up, we feel angry, cheated, and deprived of what was rightfully ours. We clutch at the gift and resent the giver.

Sometimes, however, wisdom asks us to let go.

After much waiting and a few messes along the way, Abraham and Sarah had received the child promised to them. Sarah had laughed at the idea that such a thing would ever happen. But it did. The boy was born and named Isaac, meaning "laughter." This boy was the long awaited fulfillment of a promise that had exceeded their capacity to believe.

And then we get a divine "bait and switch." After all the waiting and messes, God appears ready to scrub the whole plan. God asks Abraham to sacrifice Isaac. Go up on a mountain, place the boy on an altar, raise the knife, and give back what you waited so long to receive. Here's the reward for your patient faith: sacrifice your child.

We're stunned and even angry about this. Amazingly, Abraham goes. It has been noted that the only time Abraham speaks in this story is to present himself obediently to God. "Here I am," he says; that's it, "Here I am." He listens and obeys, walking up a hill with his son, his only son (a significant phrase in the story) planning all the while to do what we could never dream of doing.

Abraham's story has the kind of ending we always hope for - - the tragedy is averted. Abraham raises the blade above his son, but his hand is stayed. Isaac is spared, and God provides a ram for the sacrifice. They all go home together happy and relieved. But there's nothing in this story that says our willingness to let go means that we will eventually be allowed to keep what we so deeply cherish.

Too many parents have wept over the grave of a child. Too many competent and capable people have been told they no longer have a job. Too many strong and able-bodied people have been incapacitated. Sometimes we let go, and we are left empty handed.

This is foolishness to us. Maybe that’s why Paul quotes Isaiah 40:13 in his discussion about God’s wisdom and how it runs counter to our wisdom. “Who has known the mind of the Lord that he may instruct him?”

Sometimes, wisdom asks us to stand before God with open hands and say what Abraham said, “Here I am.” This response means we hold every gift as just that - a gift - be it our health, our work, our loved ones. All of it comes to us by grace.

The world’s wisdom says that we have a right to these things. God’s wisdom asks us to offer them up – always careful never to worship the gift above the giver.

What are you being asked to let go of today?

Pastor Kingsley

JULY -- IT’S SUMMER – FINALLY!

Summer is heating up fast. Our Christian Education program just wound down in June, graduates were sent forth to the strains of “Pomp and Circumstance,” the mission team to Nicaragua took off, then Great American Weekend ushers in the month followed by Vacation Bible School.

This time of year is one of activity but also finishing up, closing out, relaxing, and getting recharged for the next phase of our lives. Take stock—what have I completed now, how did I do, and where am I headed next. Summer and vacations provide us with opportunities to remove ourselves from daily routines as we “charge down” and also work in some time for reflection and new goal setting for the fall.

I always take time to straighten up the music office, explore new service music, and think about our fall music plans for the choir and starting up the bell choir. When activities quiet down, it creates space for inspiration and creativity to come streaming in. My themes are renew, refresh, recharge.

Our choir season is now over and our summer choir starts on July 12, the Sunday after Great American Weekend. Each Sunday we put together an anthem with the singers who are able to be there. We invite you to come and sing with us -- just be there at 8:45 a.m. as we gather around the piano to rehearse.

Get out and enjoy the season, but remember that we will be here each Sunday worshipping together as we sing, pray, listen to God’s word, and fellowship with one another at coffee hour in our newly air-conditioned Sanctuary and Fellowship Hall. I invite you to allow your presence to minister to others and be part of the “worshipping through” even in summer. You matter!

Carpe diem – seize the day!

Prayer Shawl Ministry News

As we move into the summer months, the need for our gifts and yarn to make them continues. We thank Darlene Bartley who received a bag of yarns donated at the end of May - most of which have probably already been made and delivered to recipients as hugs. Nancy Mason has been sorting through tubs of yarn that her mom, Dorothy Gott, didn't get made and she brought in several items to be completed. Thanks Lisa M., for finishing those as well.

It was reported that a shawl was presented to Connie B. of Goshen as she finished her last chemo treatment and began her radiation. She was most appreciated. Orra Wood's daughter, Sandy, was given a lovely shawl in shades of pink made by Joan Howell as she begins her treatment. Barbara Hankins quickly made lap robes for Steve and Carol Coon as they were both hospitalized at the same time.

Jo Wolfe has been busy making items for many family members who each want to showcase her wonderful talents in their homes. Of course, the little ones baptized each get a remembrance as well. Lisa Montalbano was going to see that Bob Johnson got a gift from the ministry while he was in ORMC. Beryl Yungman took a beautiful shawl of soft green and lavender shades made by Joan Howell and shipped it to her daughter in Colorado who has an employee quite ill. Thanks to all the ladies for their tireless efforts! These gifts sent from our doors are more welcomed than most of us realize. The work on each gift is totally unique and lovely. God bless.

Remember, we have poems and prayers for all occasions to give with the gift, and also a letter explaining why we do what we do, and what the colors stand for as well. We try to enclose these with each gift we send out.

Have a wonderful and relaxing summer. If you want to take up the hobby of crocheting, see any of our group who I am sure will be glad to give you a lesson to get you started. New members are always welcome.

Consider yourselves hugged!

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION

Our group of ladies met in the parlor on the first Monday of June to discuss the Great American Weekend tent. By the time this reaches your mailboxes in July, it might just be one big happy memory. Again, the ladies will set up very early in the morning and sell coffee and tea to the vendors who are gearing up for the day and then switch to iced coffee, iced tea, and with the addition, we hope, of mock Mint Juleps.

If it is a warm weekend like last year, the sales will be brisk, especially as our visitors come from their church tours. We do hope many of our ladies in the congregation will join us if only for a few hours to serve the community and show what a great group PW is.

Our annual Honoree Luncheon is still in the planning stages, and when the decision is made as to where, when and who---- it will be announced in church. Look for items in the weekly bulletins about this.

PW will not be holding meetings during the summer, but we are available at church or on the phone from the directory if you have questions or want to know what is going on with PW.

We will meet again early in September. We hope you all have a wonderful and enjoyable and healthy summer. Do something for fun, smile at a stranger, open a door for someone, send a prayer out to someone who needs it, plant that seed, and count your blessings every day.

God speed,

Wendy Lee Paffenroth
PW Secretary

- A man and woman argued every morning before leaving for work about who would make the morning coffee. He insisted it was the woman's job. She finally couldn't take it any longer and told him it was the man's job, it said so in the Bible. He asked her to show him where in the Bible it said that. Right away, she flipped open the Good Book and said – "Look, it's right here..... He Brews."

ENJOY YOUR SUMMER!

Bells, bells, bells . . .

Our church has a full range of English handbells made by Schumerich. We have in the past had a handbell choir that rehearsed regularly and played on special occasions. If you would be interested in learning to ring, please let me know. We are considering starting a beginning handbell choir in the fall. You do not have to read music, just know your left from your right hand. You will be helped along the way as you learn to ring, and ringing is open to all ages.

Editor's Note: "Creating Bridges in Nicaragua" is the second in a series of columns that will appear regularly in The Tower Tie highlighting the mission work of our church. Our first trip to Nicaragua with Bridges to Community was made in 1999. Scott Roper has made several of these trips and has been serving on the Board of Directors of Bridges to Community since 2010. A large group of church missionaries left Goshen for Nicaragua on June 29. - Sue Varden

Creating Bridges in Nicaragua

By Scott Roper

Did you ever take a trip to a far-away place that changed your way of thinking about other people? I have, and I would like to share my experiences with you.

Seven years ago I participated in our church mission trip to the Ticuantepe region of Nicaragua. About fifteen church missionaries partnered with an organization called Bridges to Community, which builds sturdy homes, schools, clinics, and infrastructure in Nicaragua. Working with Bridges, we set off to Nicaragua to help construct two sturdy homes.

When most of us travel, we experience local culture in an insulated way. We typically return each evening to a hotel full of first- world amenities and first- world guests. Our mission trips to Nicaragua are different.

On these trips, we stay in community – in the home of a typical Nicaraguan family in a typical rural village. The home consists of one or two rooms with a dirt or tile floor, a wood-burning stove, and a few outhouses for the whole village. We eat typical Nicaraguan food (mostly rice and beans). We work side-by-side with the Nicaraguan community. We share our life experiences with the members of the community with whom we live and work, and they share their life experiences with us.

This is called "service learning." It is the cornerstone of Bridges to Community. We go to Nicaragua to build and to live in the community. While there, we learn about the community, and the community learns about us. We all benefit from each other. Together, we create a "bridge" between the local community and our church's missionaries that remains in place long after we return to our comfortable lives in the United States.

Seven years ago we built a bridge between a village in Ticuantepe and our church in Goshen. That bridge affected me so deeply that when I returned to the United States, I decided to get involved and not be a bystander. I then went on additional church mission trips to Nicaragua and also to New Orleans and Joplin. Each time, we built a bridge between the local community and our church. I subsequently joined the Board of Directors and Finance Committee of Bridges to Community. I raised funds for a school in Nicaragua and a community center in the Dominican Republic, both constructed by Bridges to Community.

I do this for several reasons. First, my faith compels me to help others when I can. Second, I am able to help. Third, I benefit from service learning along with the entire community. And, fourth, I intend to set a positive example for my children about helping other people.

This summer my daughter, Shannon, and my son, Mikey, will join me and a new group of church missionaries to travel to Nicaragua to help construct two sturdy homes. Two Nicaraguan families will benefit from the homes, and we will create a new bridge between the Nicaraguan community and our church missionaries that will stay with us for life.
