AN UNEXPECTED VISIT

After we were brought safely through, we then learned that the island was called Malta.

—Acts 28:1

At the website www.visitmalta.com there is a page dedicated to the historic connection between the island and the apostle Paul. The page states proudly that Christianity has a long history in Malta dating back nearly 2000 years and that, “according to tradition,” the apostle Paul himself brought the Christian faith to the island.

What this page of the website fails to mention is that Paul did indeed bring Christianity to Malta, but he did so entirely by accident; it was an unexpected visit, or so it appears to us as we read Luke’s account in Acts 28.

The Shipwreck

Where we live, storms are almost always in a hurry. They roll across the state on their way to the ocean. Some storm systems may be larger than others and they seem to amble leisurely through our part of the world, but rarely do they pretend to be interested in staying for very long. Storm warnings are issued and usually expire within a matter of hours.

That makes it hard for me to get my mind around a storm at sea that lasts for two weeks. Two weeks of violent up and down, back and forth movement; two weeks of sea spray and being constantly wet and nauseated; two weeks of exhausting work to stay afloat made worse by not eating. Luke twice mentions the storm entering its fourteenth day (Acts 27:27, 33).

And then they made out the shape of a distant bay.

Lifting the sails and casting off the anchors, they made an effort to “run the ship ashore.” It didn’t work. Not far from the shoreline the ship struck a sandbar or reef of some kind. The stern of the ship was stuck while the bow was being shattered by the surf.

All 276 people on board plunged into the waters. Some swam. Others held on to planks and pieces of the ship. “And so it was that all were brought safely to land” (27:44).

A Strange Place

Eventually storms come to an end. And quite often, when they do, you find yourself in a place you never intended to be. After a long season of holding things together in a chaotic and convulsing world, you discover solid ground beneath your feet. You may be standing up, but you’re standing in a strange place.

The island of Malta was an answer to prayer. It was literally God’s salvation for everyone on that ship. But Paul never intended to be in Malta. A good 60 miles south of Sicily, Malta was a far cry from God’s promised destination of Rome.

So what do you do when the journey to Rome lands you in Malta? What do you do when the place you actually inhabit is nowhere close to where you had planned to be? You can pass your days there in self-pity and resentment. That’s one way to live your life. Plenty of people do just that every single day.

But there’s another way. You could choose to bring blessing and hope and healing to the place you happen to be until God moves you to the next place. That’s what Paul did on Malta.

Paul was on the island of Malta for three months before continuing his journey to Rome (28:11). While there, he showed the inhabitants of that place what God was like by blessing and healing. You don’t need to work miracles to do that. God wants to show his mercies and kindness in the place where you will be today — and God wants to do this through you.

St. Paul is still honored today on the island of Malta. What kind of impact will you make in the unlikely place to which God has led you today?

Pastor Kingsley

OCTOBER IS THE SETTLING-IN MONTH

The weather has cooled down, the leaves are beginning to change, and we “fall” into our autumn routines. It is the rhythm of life that follows the changing of the seasons. Actually, each day has its special rhythm and feeling. I can “feel” Saturday and I can “feel” Sunday perhaps because of what I do on those particular days. But it’s a good feeling. I am always refreshed and renewed by our Sunday worship service; it prepares me for the week ahead.

I often begin the day with the choir’s anthem from Sunday in my head. It is a fact that music carries energy and resonates with the very cells of our bodies. It’s why music as therapy has come to be known as an aid to healing and relaxation. When you hear the organ, when the choir sings, when an instrument plays, something is happening inside of you – the music is speaking to your soul whether you are consciously aware of it or not. Especially in times of distress, the old familiar hymns we grew up with “come back” to us as comfort. I believe that is why I have had more requests for the choir to sing particular favorites that have meaning for people. The words and music speak to our common human experience and are healing for the soul.

It is also my experience that when the pastor is preaching, there is always a “zing” that comes through, a kernel of truth and understanding—something you may see in a new light, something you have never thought about in quite that way before. It is the inspiration coming through the spoken word that moves us inwardly to outward action in our lives as Christians.

May I urge you to allow yourself to open up to receiving the healing that spoken word and music can bring to your soul. It is health and life affirming. I fully believe it.

The choir is expanding its ranks, and we have an exciting music program planned for the fall. Our youth will share with us in word and song what they have been learning since Christian Education started back up. It’s always interesting and uplifting to hear what they have to say—because they do it with great enthusiasm! October 25 is Reformation Sunday where we remember and celebrate our reformed heritage with A Mighty Fortress Is Our God as the processional hymn.

Prayer Shawl Ministry News

We welcome the fall months as it is easier to crochet without the heat and humidity. As we complete the 8th year of the Prayer Shawl Ministry, we have lost count on how many gifts have been sent from our church doors. We have been overwhelmed by the cards, notes, letters, and comments we have received in response to our shawl ministry gifts. Support by our congregation makes this your ministry as well as the group of faithful women who create the shawls as we couldn't have come this far without your blessings of beautiful yarns we find in our basket in the Narthex. Our ladies have a good sense of color combination, and I believe every gift is a gift of love as those balls of yarn become works of art.

I don't always get the information on where each gift goes, but please know we would need a separate Tower Tie edition if I did. I share with you what is given to me.

- Thanks to Janet Landrigan of Warwick who gave me a bag of yarn to add to our basket. Sue Varden, working with Presby Build, thought a nice blanket might be good for the new home that is being dedicated shortly. There is a young lady in a wheelchair who will love the gift. Jo Wolfe happened to put together a beautiful lap robe that came out so pretty using up odds and ends - so we passed it on to Sue who will present the gift from our church. Thank you to Sue and Jo.
- Often a family will come back for a second shawl for another member of their family who has taken ill. So it happened, a friend of mine who lost her sister to lung cancer, (and this sister loved her shawl), has a sister-in-law who has cancer and is having chemotherapy. I told Linda B. a shawl was in the making, and she was so appreciative. We are glad we could offer comfort to this family once again.
- Wendy Bynum shared a T-shirt she saw online that read, "If crocheting would burn calories I would be a skinny "hooker." Very cute, Wendy and so true. Some of our ladies crochet every night. Maybe it is just our hands that get skinny. As autumn and winter approach, our hooks will be flying again to keep up with the demand. Thanks to our ladies and to the congregation who support our work.

God bless each of you!

Wendy Paffenroth, Shawl Secretary

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION

We welcome back the PW group after a summer off. A baker's dozen came out on Monday, September 14 to discuss what we have going on in the last quarter of the year.

First and foremost, we are all excited about the upcoming Honoree's Luncheon for three devoted women of the church: Mary-Gray Griffith, Myrna Tucker, and Orra Wood. Our wonderful graphic designer, Carol Gabella, gave those at the meeting a sneak peak at the program. I am sure everyone attending will be saving theirs. Beautiful job, Carol! By the time you are read this, the luncheon will be in the history book of the church. Hope everyone that attended had a memorable day. We also hope there will be pictures to share. Congratulations once again ladies.

Caroline Keller, among others, has been helping PW organize the receptions for the recent funerals that have taken place in our church. These things, as we all know, come up suddenly and not all the women can help. If you have helped in the past, we thank you! It means so much to the family to have the hall and reception set up after the funeral. If you think you might want to lend a hand in the future, please see Caroline at church, call her at (845) 294-5508, or leave a note in the office with your name and phone number. This way, we can generate a list of helpers - sometimes it is as simple as setting up the room or carrying a coffee pot. Putting your name on the list does not obligate you to help at every funeral repast, just that you may be available to if we are shorthanded. Also, we often need baked goods for the reception; so if you'd be willing to make something, please indicate that as well. Thank you in advance.

Caroline is wearing many hats and will again help with, along with some other ladies, organizing the Chili and Soup Sale at the Holiday Fair on November 21. We are in need of quart jars. If you have some to offer, you can leave them by the office for PW; and, if you are willing to make soup or chili for the day, Caroline has the best recipes - just let her know. Last year we sold out quickly so we would love to have even more jars of chili and soup to offer this year. Again, jars and makers are needed to make this a success.

Yes, it is autumn and soon come the holidays and with it the BIGGER AND BETTER HOLIDAY FAIR on November 21. The Deacons are doing their very best to make it very inviting for all. With this event, the ladies will again do their Bake Sale; if you can help us, it would be greatly appreciated. China plates and baskets will be available several weeks in advance for you to put your donations on. Watch the bulletin on Sunday for the information as it gets closer. Also at the ladies table, there will be a raffle this year. Sharlene Bischof has made a beautiful hand-crocheted afghan in Victorian cream yarn. She is donating it with the proceeds going to our window restoration. She has put in more hours than we can count, and it is fabulous! What a present it would make for someone. Make sure you get your tickets at the fair.

Also, don't forget the Quilt Fair will be going on at the same time as the Holiday Fair. Barbara and Kathy will be looking in the near future for those who want to display an item or items. This is always such a beautiful way to show off our sanctuary. Please see them if you want to work with them in setting up the display or have an item you'd like to share. And remember to bring your cameras that day. It is truly lovely.

Please check with the office if you have lost something. A red-flowered earring was found in September and will be left with Pat at the office.

The ladies talked about how long it takes for us to get reimbursed from our own account in the church. Although we have our own account, we need a better way to reimburse the ladies when they lay out money for funeral receptions, etc. This issue will be further discussed at our next meeting.

Lastly, we discussed the Christmas Gifts Bags that are given to those congregational members who are not able to be with us for various reasons.

We are already starting to collect items to give to them. Last year, you overwhelmed us and everyone appreciated the gifts. So if you are out shopping and see good books, note cards, chap stick, body lotion, small game books, playing cards, etc., pick them up and drop them by the office with Pat, our wonderful church secretary, marked "PW/Christmas." She will see that we get them. When we get closer to the date of packaging them, we will be looking for baked goods for the bags as well. Thank you for helping us make the holidays special for those in our church we love, but don't get to see too often.

Our next meeting will be the first Monday of October around 7:00 p.m. in the parlor. We would love to have you join us!

God's blessings on each of you,

Wendy Lee Paffenroth

For Pastor:

- Three boys were bragging about their dads. The first boy said “My dad writes words on paper called poems and he gets $50 for each one.” The second boy said “Well, my dad writes words on paper and it is called a song, and he gets paid $100 for each one.” The third boy said, “That’s nothing, my dad writes words on paper and calls it a sermon and they need eight people to collect all the money that comes his way.”

People want to sit in the front of the bus.... the back of the church....but be the center of attention!

- A father and son were walking along a beach and came upon a dead seagull. The little boy asked his dad what happened. The father said that the bird’s time had come; he had died and had gone on to heaven. The little boy looked at his father and said, “So why did God throw him back?”

As long as school continues to test students, there will always be PRAYER in school.

Graham where he could find it. Rev. Graham thanked the boy and told him he should come with his family to the Baptist church that evening and he will show him where heaven is. The little boy said, “I don’t think we will come, you don’t even know how to find the Post Office.”

Editor's Note: "The Night I Met My Brother on the Midnight Run" is another in the series of columns that will appear regularly in "The Tower Tie" highlighting the mission work that takes place in our church. Guest columnists will share stories on distributing food to our neighbors; constructing housing alongside partner families in Newburgh; building cultural bridges in Nicaragua; and bringing hope with a cup of coffee, clean clothing and conversation to the homeless in New York City. Our church has been participating in the Midnight Run for nearly twenty years. Midnight Run, Inc. runs over 1,000 relief missions yearly to the homeless poor on the streets of Manhattan. The human exchange, rather than the exchange of goods, is the essence of the Midnight Run mission. The next church Midnight Run will be October 24. See Midnight Run Coordinator, Lori Baird. If you have a story to share, please contact volunteer editor Sue Varden.

The Night I Met My Brother on the Midnight Run

A personal story by Sue Varden

It was my first Midnight Run, and I was anxious as I rode into Manhattan. I didn't know what lay ahead, and I was concerned about our safety.

Our five-car caravan with "Midnight Run" written on the side windows drove up alongside a church, the first of five stops we would make during the pre-dawn hours. We parked on the street and got out of our cars.

There were five or six stone steps leading up to three massive church doors. Scaffolding overhead created a protective ceiling for the people laying in the four long boxes on the top steps. Three men crawled out of their makeshift shelters and walked directly to the lead car where hot coffee was served.

"Get me a cup of coffee," a lone voice from inside one of the boxes yelled. "Make it black."

I looked around. I seemed to be the only one standing motionless, dazed by the scene before me. "I guess he's talking to me," I thought. As I went to get the cup of coffee, a voice inside my head said, "Who is this guy? Everyone else is getting their own coffee. What's the matter with this one?" I don't react well to being ordered to do something and, unfortunately, now I had an attitude.

The unwelcomed voice in my head continued as I walked up the steps to the stranger lying in the box. But when I squatted down and reached out to hand him the coffee ... and he reached up from his box to take it ... our faces were so close that we looked directly into each other's eyes. His were dark and matched his skin color. Until, for a split second, they changed color, and I saw the blue eyes and blond hair framing the face of my own brother who had passed away several years before. He had been homeless, living in his car in Michigan until he lost 100 pounds, took himself to the hospital, and learned he had esophageal cancer. He died three months later.

After the jolt of seeing my brother's face, my demeanor toward the stranger changed. Concern flowed freely as I asked him, "Are you alright here? Do the police bother you? Is this a safe place for you?" The man replied politely, and we had a brief, but easy conversation.

As I returned to the car to go to our next stop, that voice inside my head spoke to me again; this time with a different tone, "You are not here to judge, you are here only to serve," and for the rest of the Run that voice was silent. I've always thought of it this way; that God had lifted that judgmental voice from me for the rest of the night. And I was grateful.

During one of our last stops, a homeless man asked me where we were from. "Orange County," I said, unsure if he would know where that was.

“You people care about us all the way up there?” he asked.

“We sure do,” I replied humbly, “after all, we are all family.”

Over the years I have often thought about the man in the box and wondered why I saw my own brother so clearly in this stranger’s face. It may have been the fear, despair and bewilderment that I had seen in his eyes that night, because I had also seen that in my brother’s eyes during his last weeks of life. It may have been that God used the stranger and these circumstances to teach me something that I needed to know as I continued living my own life. Either way, I remain grateful.

Our church has a full range of English handbells made by Schumerich. We have in the past had a handbell choir that rehearsed regularly and played on special occasions. If you would be interested in learning to ring, please let me know. We are considering starting a beginning handbell choir in the fall. You do not have to read music, just know your left from your right hand. You will be helped along the way as you learn to ring, and ringing is open to all ages.
